BRITAIN AND JAPAN

London, June 19.

The greatest importance is attached to a continued close friendship and understanding between Japan and the British Empire, according to the spokesmen of the two peoples who to-night touched upon the causes of possible friction in the Pacific against which they must guard.

Sir Samuel Hoare, Great Britain's new Foreign Minister, speaking at a dinner of the Japan Society in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Tsuneo Matsudaira said that when the Japanese Minister to Britain returned to Japan he wanted him to take back a message from the British people.

"I want you to say that we are conscious of the fact that we two peoples have many of the things which matter most in the world in common. We are both great island powers and still possess the inestimable blessing of an hereditary monarchy. We are two very enterprising races and rightly determined to leave our marks in the history of the world."

"Sometimes difficulties may arise between us. Let us discuss them as friends, anxious to understand each other's viewpoint. Anglo-Japanese relations have not been entirely free from disturbing factors in recent times. I will only mention the recent report we received from North China; I will only mention the difficulties that are bound to arise from time to time between two powerful industrial countries trading over the face of the world."

COMMON DESIRE

"I hope their excellencies will tell the Japanese people that there are many men and women in England who wish to see these difficulties removed, just as, we are sure, there are many men and women in Japan who wish to see them removed."

"We in England regard a proper understanding and collaboration between our two countries as essential not only to the stability of Asia but to the prosperity of the whole world."

Replying, Mr. Matsudaira said that the Anglo-Japanese friendship has stood the test of time. It was firmly established now as traditional.

There had been several problems in the last few years, he admitted, which had tended to produce misunderstanding and mischief, but there was no problem, however difficult, which could not be solved sooner or later with goodwill and candour on both sides.

DIRECT CONTACT

"It is regrettable that unrest has existed not only in the Far East but throughout the world, and strong efforts are required more than ever to dispel the misunderstandings between nations. This object is not obtainable by diplomatic and official efforts only. The direct contact of nations is necessary," said the Japanese Minister.

Mr. Matsudaira alluded to the Society of International Cultural Relations which had arranged for a professor to visit England and lecture on Japan.

He was convinced, he said, that a good understanding and friendship between the two nations was most important to the peace of the Far East.

"Therefore we must continue our whole-hearted efforts to that end," he asserted.

Mr. Stanley Bruce, Australian High Commissioner in London, said that probably the area of the world in which the greatest international problems of the future would arise bordered on the Pacific Ocean. It was imperative that the happiest understanding and most cordial relations should exist between Japan and the British Empire.

CRITICISM FROM FRANCE

Britain's Action

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Paris, June 19.

The French criticism of England's action in signing Anglo-German Naval agreement takes on a more acid tone in the evening papers on Wednesday which seemingly and irrelevantly introduce the Abyssinian question into the discussion.

At the back of this, however, the desire is discernible to take revenge for wounded pride by withdrawing the support of England's policy towards Italy in the Abyssinian dispute, a strikingly hostile attitude towards Abyssinia suddenly making the appearance in many evening papers, which at the same time affirm the warmth of friendship for Italy.

"God be praised," writes the "Intransigent" enlarging on this theme that "France had returned to reason and found their Italian friends again," going on to accuse England of never having been a true friend to France.

Italy's efforts for European peace were inestimable and nobody could convince France whether she ought to oppose Italy's intentions towards Abyssinia in order to keep England's friendship, especially since the land where slavery still prevails "ought to have the greatest interest of being civilised by the great Latin nation."

There is only one way in avoiding war "between Abyssinia and Italy," writes "Paris Soir," and that is for Abyssinia to concede to the Italian demands. "Anything else would lead to a breach of Italy with the League of Nations, thus seriously endangering France's policy in Central Europe." "Sauerwein" in the same paper declares "Laval will think twice about linking his policy with England's in the Abyssinian question" declares the same paper.

HOPE FOR PACT,

Due To German's Increase

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, May 31.

If Germany is sincere "and there is no reason to believe otherwise," there is once more real hope for the air pact proposed by Britain," said Sir Philip Sassoon to-day.

Sir Philip, who is Under-Secretary for Air, was addressing the Holborn Chamber of Commerce.

"The reason for our speeding up of the air programme was frankly admitted by Mr. Baldwin last week," he added.

"It is that, while the Government's estimates of actual German air strength were approximately accurate at the time they were made, allowance has had to be made for the great increase Germany has made in her capacity for rapid expansion of her air strength."

SECRET MANUFACTURE

"It will not be necessary for me to explain to an audience such as this how extremely difficult it is to keep track of the progress made in capacity for production in any form of manufacture, if such measures are taken in secret. The machines themselves, however, are more difficult to conceal. There is no reason, therefore, to believe that the German strength organised in squadrons is greater than had been assumed."

"Nor have we any present ground for doubting that the German air arm is anything more than that equality with France which Herr Hitler proclaims it is. If Germany had any ulterior motive, she need not have exposed her hand so soon. Since the exposure was made freely, it is reasonable to accept it at its face value."

"An air pact whereby the security of each of the air Powers in Western Europe will be guaranteed against aggression by the other

LANE CRAWFORDS

The mid-summer shipment of new hats on display are really smart and another point which is quite as important is the reasonable prices. The new straws in porcupine and pineapple are the last word in style. There was a very attractive model of a sailor in the new porcupine straw and another model in pineapple, in white and cream shades. Just imagine a smart hat for $3.75. One should take this advantage and call in at the Ladies department, before these hats are sold out.

MAIZEES

Maizees has just unpacked the nicest lot of belts to be seen anywhere. Beautiful summer colours in extra fine kid these are specially used for evening wear. Then there are others for day in all colours and should improve the look of white dresses. New shipment of goods are expected.

RIVELLE

Is having a sale and from what was in the shop, there were a lot of nice dresses going very cheap. The pale pink lace evening dress with coatee to match was particularly attractive, this was priced at $30. A lot of hats from $5 and day dresses from $3. Here is a good opportunity to replenish your wardrobe.

EVE

Why pay a tailor more money when you can get a dress from Eve for only $2.95. All these dresses are guaranteed to wash.

MAYOS

Have just received another shipment of hats in fabrics all very good looking and reasonably priced. They are expecting more American dresses by the next mail.

SUMMER STAINS

Grass stains on clothing should be removed as soon as possible. Rub them thoroughly with petrol, hang in the sunshine for as long as possible, then wash in warm, soapy water. Tar and grease can be removed from light materials with eucalyptus oil, but it may have to be applied two or three times before the stain can be eradicated. If the encyclopædia is not effective, butter, followed by petrol, should be tried. Fresh fruit stains should be rinsed in water, then sparged with diluted peroxide of hydrogen, which should then be thoroughly washed out again. Or glycerine can be applied instead. If stains made by stewed fruit have not yet dried they should immediately be saturated with powdered starch, which will absorb most, if not all, of them. If they do not disappear, try soaking them in cold water for some time, then stretch the garment over a basin and pour boiling water through it. Cream stains should first be soaked in cold water, then washed in the ordinary way. Badly stained tennis socks should be soaked in warm water and bicarbonate of soda, before soaking them apply a slice of lemon, dipped in salt, to the stains.

SUMMER STORAGE

Many winter garments will shortly be stored away for the summer months, and those who dislike storing clothes with mothballs will find the following method adequate in itself. Pack the articles in stout cardboard boxes, which should be undamaged between thick layers of newspapers. Then buy a roll of adhesive plaster from the chemist and seal the lids tightly. Garments stored in this way will not be attacked by moths.

But Plenty of It

When the pipe-band of a certain regiment of Scots played for the first time in Church Square, Freetown, a Kaffir listening to the band was asked what he thought of it.

After a few seconds' consideration he replied: "Plenty no good."

LITTLE DETAILS THAT COUNT

Art Of Perfect
Dressing

We seem to be making a cult of detail this summer. The efforts of the best-known designers make for a complete and perfectly finished appearance. Without attention to detail, there is no good dressing.

A model may be charming in itself, but there must also be the correct hat, bag, shoes, hosiery, scarf, gloves, or any other new accessory.

Very attractive is the monogram or initial. It is not new, but is one of those fads of fashion that can be presented in a novel manner. One of my smart young friends wears a small white felt hat with a bow of pale beige petersham and two striking initials worked in brown kid. There is a handbag of being with brown initials.

SHOES

Shoes have become sensible as well as chic. The Court shape for morning in glaze is ideal for summer; it is smartly trimmed with suede to tone. The straight small Cuban heel is general—the height of the heel is a matter decided by the occasion for which the shoes are required. For evening and fêtes the heel is very high, but it no longer runs under the foot. These new heels are safer and more comfortable than the older Louis styles. These are always some women who like the bar-shoe, for straps can be very comfortable.

The new Court shoes are now so well fitted, however, that they are safe to wear as well as smart. Sandal styles in mixed fabrics become more and more popular. Navy, black, and brown suede are trimmed with kid. White and brown alliances strike an unusual note.

Much stitching is used to achieve a contrast in colours. In all ways, shoes are very decorative. A practical summer-vogue is the perforated suede, kid and fabric shoe.

For the evening gold and silver kid are much in request; also sandals.

Both shoes and gloves this season are more decorative for day wear than evening. Evening shoes of crepe and long gloves of suede look their best when very simply fashioned. Daytime gloves of kid show patent trimmings. All-black, all-white and colour-point in white and beige are smart. Gloves must be perfect if of bizarre order—otherwise it is desirable to keep to the simple straightforward styles.

WEARING

In London-Paris-New York

LONDON.

In London the caped suit is very favoured, and pastel colours in "duty" pink and forget-me-not blue, as well as plain navy, with spotted or check or printed silk frocks, are having a good vogue in the shops, although the Arctic spell of weather has held back the pastel brigade from being in as full evidence as yet.

For evening, the fur tapes are liked by smart women, and for Ascot the short taffetas or watered silk coat, sac or fitting, will give length to the feminine figure and alter the silhouette yet again. As the weather gets kinder, floral patterned silk and all sorts of thin materials will blossom out. A "best seller" at one West End shop is a tailored suit in spotted silk, obtainable in all colours. The three-quarter-length cape in washing silk is to be a newcomer among fashions this season—and it will be seen matching washing silk dresses.

Which reminds me that washing silk dresses in gay stripes made in men's pyjama silks are a specialty of a famous sports-wear house, who are also sponsoring "blistered" taffetas tailored blazers, to wear over silk dresses for the tennis season or for cruising.

New summer colours at this house, for the season's fashions (and bearing Ascot largely in mind), are black and white, brown and yellow, and dark brown and violet blue.

PARIS.

Long gloves are being worn here in the evenings by the younger generation, a fashion which remains rather neglected by the older women.

There are also a number of flowered headresses to be seen, and the young idea is to have long gloves and flowered wreath or posy for the hair to match a waistband or some other detail on the gown.

More flowers are being used here on evening gowns than for many seasons past. There is also a big revival in the wide-skirted type of evening frock which lends itself so well to floral posies in the corsage or at the base of the neckline.

Another notion is to outline the décolletage with tiny flat flowers in piqué or muslin, or some other simple fabric as a contrast to tulle, taffeta or organdi.

White is immensely important for evening, especially in sheer fabrics.

A lovely white organdi gown has a narrow silk stripe running through it. The Y-shaped neckline is trimmed with tiny white piqué flowers, and a tiny pair of earrings fashioned from similar material strike a charmingly unusual and decorative note.

Gossamer fine lace is being used for other evening gowns, and dark colours such as black, navy blue, and brown look effective made into skin-fitting, gored gowns mounted over pastel ships. I saw one the other night in navy blue filmy lace over flesh-coloured chiffon. Both the skirt and the bodice were trimmed with ruffles and the corsage was gripped in the centre with an old-fashioned poste brooch.

Daytime clothes for spring stay true to the slim silhouette. When the weather gets warmer, Paris will see any number of trim little suits in starched cotton. "Baby" blue is a colour which recurs again and again for cotton and also for jersey fabrics, which are going to enjoy another season of popularity.

Tailored run-about dresses for mornings are already in the shops in dull surface crépes. They are severely plain, relying on pliqué trimmings for relief.

Most of them are in pastel colours, and there is also a great deal of chalk white. Grey and sea green is a refreshing daytime colour scheme.

Lace coats are bringing fresh style interest to evening frocks. They are unlined, and sometimes offer striking colour contrast to gowns, but more often match them.

Starched lace is particularly fashionable. Coats made from it fall into two classes. One is the slender, fitted type of coat with a tailored appearance; the other is a much more romantic looking affair, with a full flared back and elaborate sleeves.

I saw a lovely coat in white starched Duchess lace the other evening, worn over a very simple frock in white satin.

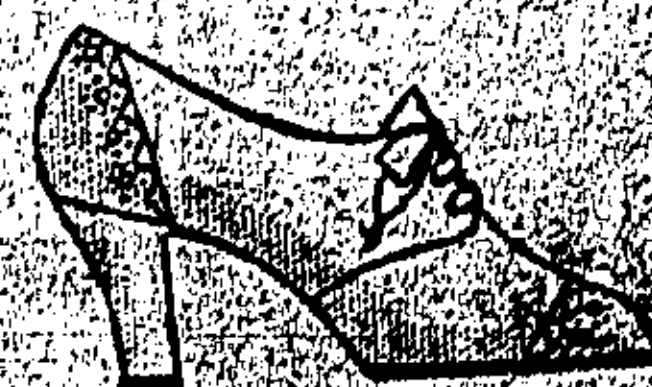

It was semi-tailored with a "nipped-in" waistline and the faintest suggestion of a swing to the skirt. The sleeves, long and slender tapered into points over the backs of the hands.

Another strikingly beautiful coat was in highly starched scarlet lace. Here the full swing back was used, and picturesque sleeves with huge puffs, developing below the elbows, with the fullness drawn into narrow wristbands. A high Medici collar reached half way up back of the head. The coat was worn over a gown in the palest maize yellow chiffon.

Heavy, soft lace coats are attractive for the older woman. They cling softly to the figure, and the sleeves invariably sponsor fullness at the shoulders to increase the slenderness of the hips. Some of them reach to the hems of instep length gowns but the more popular length is just below the knee line.

Little boleros also have a place in the scheme of lace for evening. They look rather gay and amusing with taffetas frocks in dark or dark colours.

I saw an American beauty rose taffetas frock partnered with cream lace bolero. Another in yellow starched lace made a pleasing companion to a brown taffetas frock. The sleeves of these little jackets are generally long, and the necklines are often trimmed with large butterfly bows of similar material to the dress.

SUMMER

IF YOU WANT TO BE WELL-DRESSED

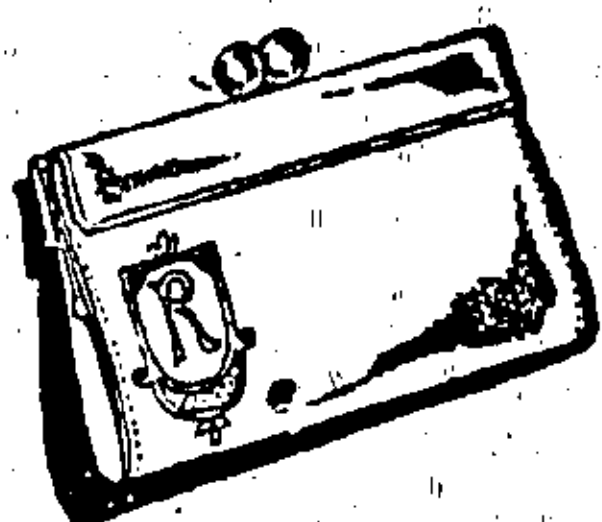

Suggestive Points Detailed

- Don't buy a dress suitable for only one occasion.
- Don't try to outdo your friends.
- Don't wear jewellery without a definite purpose.
- Don't adopt a style simply because it is new.
- Don't overlook the importance of accessories and personal grooming.
- Don't wear black when you're tired.
- Don't try and dress to please others. Think of yourself first.
- Don't choose clothes that overshadow your personality.
- Don't be afraid of simplicity in your wardrobe.
- Don't dress so that one phase of your costume stands out separately from the others. Everything you wear should combine to form a perfect ensemble.

These ten rules which should govern the life of every woman who seeks to be considered "well dressed," were compiled by Rosalind Russell, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featured player who recently completed leading roles in such productions as FORSAKING ALL OTHERS, RECKLESS, WEST POINT OF THE AIR, and CASINO MURDER CASE.

"There is no such thing as an 'order of importance' in a list of this type," she said. "The last item could well be the first—and the first the last. Each one is important in creating a perfect picture of good taste. Let's take them one by one."

"We are all acquainted with the woman who buys a new dress for every occasion—and constantly complains that she has 'nothing to wear.' This 'buying a dress for one occasion' is one of the most serious wardrobe faults. It is due principally to a lack of thought—a lack of the ability to look ahead. The money a woman spends on an outfit of this type would purchase the smartest kind of an ensemble which would be good for a number of occasions—and nine times out of ten just as proper for the big event whatever it may be."

THE STYLES TO DRESS

"The smartest woman I ever knew wore the same dress time after time. She was consistently well-dressed by simply changing her hat and accessories. She bought on an average of eight outfits a year, but each of them was well and wisely chosen. As a result, no matter what type of an invitation she received, she was always ready to accept—and always the smartest of the crowd."

"Now for the second 'don't,'" she continued, "and this one is just as simple to follow as it is important to observe. Don't try and outdo your friends! It is my personal observation that the keen dress competition between women is responsible for more bad taste in costuming than any other single factor. If one woman wears a lovely clip or bracelet, her best friend will want to appear with two or even three. I have seen women wear as many as four bracelets at a time—and each one of them a masterpiece of craftsmanship. As a result none of them showed to advantage, and the impression created was only one of extremely bad taste."

JEWELLERY

"This brings us around to the fourth item. 'Don't wear jewellery without a purpose!'"

"Jewellery is too widely considered as extra adornment rather than an explicit part of a costume. Every clip, bracelet, necklace or ear-ring should have a definite reason for being. It should serve to add a bit of colour to an otherwise drab costume; it should accentuate a neckline or hold a collar in place. This habit of pinning on this or that simply because it happens to be lying within reach on the dressing-table is decidedly wrong. Choose your items of jewellery with a definite purpose and resolve to wear them only when necessity demands their presence."

"The sad results on every side of us from women who wear a thing just because someone tells them it is the 'latest style,' should prove sufficient warning for the importance of observing number five. It is silly to attempt to be 'first with the newest' unless the 'newest' happens to be your particular style."

IMPORTANCE OF ACCESSORIES

"The importance of accessories and personal grooming cannot be stressed too heavily," she continued. "Always remember that your hair, your skin, your fingernails, the shoes you wear, the gloves you carry, the handkerchief tucked in your pocket are just as much a part of the picture you present as your gown. In many instances accessories can make or break a costume. A dress of the simplest lines may be made smart by just the right hat, gloves, bag and shoes."

COLOUR TROUBLE

"The matter of colour is a difficult one to discuss. Everyone has her own particular pet. But there is one thing to remember if your preference is black. There is no arguing the matter that black is smart. It is always in good taste for any occasion but women should learn to curb this 'black' complex. There is nothing as dangerous, especially if you are the least bit tired. After a hard day's work, don't slip into a black dinner gown. Try a warm brown, or even a deep shade of red and see those tired lines disappear!"

"As far as dressing to please others is concerned, I believe that most women are gradually getting

PARIS FASHIONS

Mainbocher And Others

With the revival of jewels in the hair and on the head it is fitting that dress should be dignified. Dresses with trains of rich materials are cut on long, graceful lines. The necklines are low in front as well as at the back. The Indian head wrap and the Turkish looped skirt are the latest of all, but are worn as yet by only a few. Lanvins looped front skirt drapery is an adaptation from Turkey; Jean Patou's tussore dress and head wrap in green and cream are also Oriental.

Mainbocher is showing seaside clothes. With white pique shorts are straight coats of blue and white stripes, with spotted blue and white shorts are plain white pique jackets. A blue linen coat has a white hood. There are linen dresses which button down from the waist to the hem; one is of blue and white stripes, another is wholly white. With a grey coat and skirt of flowered bed ticking goes a scarlet scarf. The tailor-made skirts are slightly flared. Short neat-fitting jackets may have velvet collars of another colour; thus a brown suit has a rosy-beige collar. Long coats for early autumn fit closely and button to the neck; some have collars and belts. Velvet jackets are put with woollen skirts. There are also velvet dresses, capes, and boleros, red, green, and brown.

THAT NEW COLLAR

Have you a frock that needs freshening up? Why not have a new collar and cuffs? All the interest in day frocks is centred above the waist this season.

Lace jabot and cuffs in a tinted pale pink give a dressy note to a straight-cut frock.

Jabots also give length of line if you are "not so slim." Deep gauntlet cuffs of needle-run lace, with a collar of Medici line, have a dignified air.

Bright Hungarian colourings have added their quota to make gayer our Jubilee tints—red, green, blue and yellow sequins appear in geometrical designs on collars and cuffs. Beaded collars on white grounds have brilliant multi-coloured designs. Peter Pan and Toby collars give a Quaker look to schoolgirl-looking frocks.

A pleated or gauged chiffon front in beige, ivory or shell pink is delightful in an afternoon frock. White pique collars with tab ends or long revers are worn with coat frocks and jumper suits.

You must have a touch of line somewhere—it is the seasons' most popular material. Stripes, checks or the polka dot will make cheery collars and cuffs to a frock.

away from it. Continuing along a line of this type is fatal as far as style is concerned. Every woman knows, or should study herself until she does know, her particular type. When she discovers it to her own satisfaction, she should adhere strictly to it, regardless of what others may say. When you are dressed to please yourself, your mental attitude is right to put yourself across. If you are uncomfortable in your clothes, other people sense it and you are beaten before you start.

CHOOSE WISELY

"A very common dress mistake is choosing clothes that overshadow your personality. Upon seeing you enter a room your friends should never be conscious of what you are wearing red because she can't make herself audible over the colour. The same thing applies to style. An exotic person in an exotic gown makes herself felt in a crowd. A little mouse type in an exotic gown is all gown and no personality."

"The last two 'don'ts' are self-explanatory," she continued. "Never be afraid of the simple gown in your wardrobe. Simplicity is the keynote of good style. Dress so that you create a perfect ensemble, see that no one thing you are wearing stands out beyond the other. One safe way to accomplish this is to stick to the same colour tones in gown and accessories."

It is by following these rules religiously that Rosalind Russell built up her reputation for smartness in clothes.

"Anyone who wants to take the time can do it," she concluded.

THE POLISHED LOOK AT ASCOT

The polished finish is most helpful in the dress scheme. A belt and shining bouquet relieves all dullness. Consider only that chic touch of the patent trimming on gloves and shoes of dull kid or suede.

There are, too, the various accessories in metal, silver and gold gleams and flecks that relieve the most demure dark wool or heavy silken stuff. In fact, the bright and shining gleams of light have transformed entirely dreary shades and fabrics, and give a note of gaiety at small cost.

The lacquered way is steadily growing rather than diminishing in favour; its possibilities are certainly widening. At Ascot we shall witness all sorts of new attractive clothes, with polished, summery accessories, that stand out so well against rich dark or pastel-shaded backgrounds.

BLACKCREPE AND SATIN

Black crepe and satin are for formal wear in town. The lines of such dresses are slim, the bodices fit, necklines are rounded to the throat, and sleeves are short and simple. For late afternoon and informal dinners there are long, slim, princess dresses, usually black, with neck and shoulder draperies, but sometimes lined with colour. They are often of dark velvet, and a heavy bow and ends may trim the skirt.

Evening dresses have long trains, are cut low to a point, back and front, and have capes or light wraps with them. Flowers are worn in bunches at the waist. Mainbocher works in dark blue velvet, black satin, net, spotted crepe, and figured and sprigged muslin.

Capes continue as much as ever; some are lined and fall full to below the waist. Schiaparelli and Chanel throw the front points back over the shoulders and achieve revers. A close-fitting cape clips the arms and has square shoulders; the pleated summer cape hangs to the waist. The Patou cape is a little like a Scotch plaid in cut, but fastens at the back of the right shoulder. Loose, three-quarter jackets of figured materials, with front pockets, go with plain dresses, or the material makes a sharp contrast, as when a white coat goes with a black dress and pale rose-pink with navy blue. Very light, figured crepe and lines make close-fitting little jackets to be worn with dark dresses and skirts. Hats worn with figured dresses are of plain straw trimmed simply with ribbon; the crowns usually are flat and the brims wide.

SUMMER LINEN HATS

When white and light-coloured linen hats are washed they take a long time to dry and frequently lose their shape in the process. To avoid washing, and thus preserve the shape of the hats, it is a good plan to clean them with a soft piece of white indiarubber, which is effective for removing the most stubborn marks. A perfectly clean rubber should be used and the linen hat should be rubbed all over.

HEADDRESS TO APPEAR

Many Wonderful Ideas

It was only to be expected that with the return to feathers, and beautiful jewels the head-dress would appear once more.

Diadems of diamonds, coloured stones, feathers and flowers can all be seen at the formal functions. The methods of treatment never recall the somewhat untidy and over-decorated heads of former days. The chic coiffure is short and well groomed curled tightly to the head, in soft waves and the floral or jewelled decoration is added. The coronal-plats have given way to the diadem and wreath.

All sorts of small blossoms are used, often to match a corsage bouquet or spray of the same. This is a particularly happy mode for the dancing debutante, as despite the girlish coiffure, the head retains its sleek "tidy" look. Ears are revealed again, but tiny curls form a soft background, and the shape of head is shown with the hair taken upwards to add height and a certain dignity which was missing from the old shingle.

A great Paris artist gives us wonderful ideas made in stands of lacquered hair of any colour. This constitutes a turban head-dress which is much to the fore at the Paris cinemas and theatres.

The return to the evening cap and variety of head-dresses has many advantages, one being a saving of time. Theatres start early, and it is helpful to tidy up one's coiffure, and adjust one of these smart turbans, or a florial-cap to balance the evening cape of chiffon or fur, as weather dictates.

ractive with a high waisted ball dress of green taffeta. The Empire modes lend them selves to decorative head ornaments. A jewelled coronet sits well if supported by curls or a separate plait.

WAX FLOWERS

White wax flowers were responsible for an all-white debutante's scheme. Her dark hair, done closely to head, had a Greek bandeau made of closely packed petals of white lilac. The dress of white crepe had a Victorian berthe of the same flowers, and a high ceinture of the same held the pleats of a very full dancing skirt. On one wrist there was a bracelet of lilac.

Real jewels in the hair, like flowers, require careful cloosing and skillful adjustment. It must be remembered in these days of sleek coiffure and small, well-shaped heads that it is woefully easy to spoil the perfection of poise and line. In fact, I cannot impress sufficiently on either, the girl or older woman the taste and care required for ornamenting the hair in the evening. It is only safe in the hands of the expert. The older woman especially.

LLOYD'S GIFT TO THE KING

Inkstand From Wood
Of The Lutine

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 7.

The King has accepted from the Corporation of Lloyd's an ink-stand made from the wood of H.M.S. Lutine, the frigate lost off the Dutch coast in 1793, from the wreck of which Lloyd's obtained the famous Lutine bell.

The gift is in the nature of a "Jubilee present" from Lloyd's, the Corporation having every reason to desire to mark their loyal appreciation of his Majesty's kindness and good will, for he laid the foundation-stone of Lloyd's building in 1925 and performed the opening ceremony in 1928.

The inkstand has been made from the design of Sir Edwin Cooper, A.R.A. It has a silver well, on which is inscribed the history of La Lutine. The inkwells are two capstan tops; silver medallion heads sculpted by Mr. C. L. J.
Doman carry the date. The sides of the inkstand are carved with the Royal Standard, a royal yard, a steering wheel, and the Lutine bell, surrounded with oak leaves, with the arms of Lloyd's on a background of sails, while the angles are carved to represent seaweed.

The oakwork and carving have been done by Mr. George Haughton, who was the craftsman responsible for the beautiful carving in the library, committee-room, and other apartments at Lloyd's.
The inscription on the inkwell reads:

"H.M. Frigate La Lutine."
La Lutine, a frigate of 900 tons, formerly in the French navy, became a British ship in 1793. On Oct. 9, 1799, she was wrecked in the shallows between Terschelling and Vlieland. All the ship's company lost their lives. Owing to the absence of survivors, the circumstances of the loss of the ship were never known. Her cargo, consisting of bullion, was insured at Lloyd's.

THE ORDER OF MERIT

Most Sparing
Decoration

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 7.

The most sparingly given of decorations is that of the Order of Merit, for the number of living holders cannot exceed 24. There are two classes in the Order—military and civil. In the former category the only living holders are Earls Jellicoe and Beatty and Admiral Sir Charles Madden.
There are 12 holders of the civil class, most of them scientific and literary scholars, with one exception, Mr. Lloyd George.

BARRIE AND FRAZER

It is known that it is one of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's greatest aspirations to become worthy of this exclusive Order, and it is freely anticipated that if he should appear in the Honours List on Monday that will be the distinction conferred on him. Other holders of the Order include Sir J. M.
Barrie, Sir James Frazer, and Lord Rutherford.

OUR PREMIER DUKE

The Duke of Norfolk—the sixteenth of his line—is 27 to-day.
He is our premier Duke and Earl, besides being Hereditary Earl Marshal. At one time he was a subaltern in the Royal Horse Guards, but the responsibilities connected with his vast estates in Sussex and Yorkshire necessitated his going on to the Reserve of Officers. His father was the head of the Roman Catholic laity in England and a most public-spirited man. He resigned his position as Postmaster-General (with Cabinet rank) in 1900 to serve in the South African campaign—and that at the age of 53!

MR LLOYD GEORGE'S POSITION

It is rumoured that Mr. Lloyd George is to be offered the post of Minister of Agriculture in the new Cabinet. The position will have a new status to show Parliamentary recognition of its importance. It will be made into a Secretaryship of State and placed on the £5000 salary basis. The Government is disappointed with the agricultural position, and if
Mr. Lloyd George finds the problem too hard the Conservatives can always point out that even his "New Deal" was not good enough.

SIR GODFREY'S FUTURE

Rumours have also been afloat that in the Cabinet changes there will be a new Secretary of State for Scotland. I hear, however, that in responsible quarters no change is anticipated, and that Sir Godfrey Collins will remain in office and receive the Church of Scotland deputation, which is to seek guidance with regard to the lines that should be followed in securing legislation to prevent the adoption in Scotland.

CINEMA TRADE NOTICES

"BORDERTOWN"

Occasionally a motion picture studio will rent for a day or a week large estates with their expensive and beautiful gardens in the midst of which is centered a great mansion.

These estates and homes are taken on short rental for the purpose of making exterior scenes for some picture requiring a character possessing riches.

Consequently, when the Warner Bros. unit making "Bordertown," which comes to the Alhambra Theatre on Sunday departed for location to a beautiful estate, not one member of the crew knew the name of the owner.

"Bordertown" is a thrilling drama, involving an ambitious foreign youth, a French girl of the border towns, and a wealthy American society beauty.

BACHELOR OF ARTS

"The most natural combination of young screen lovers since Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell climbed the flights of stairs to the garret in "7th Heaven." This is the verdict of Louis King who directed Tom Brown and Anita Louise in "Bachelor of Arts" having its final screenings to-day at the Queen's Theatre.

The story of "Bachelor of Arts" is said to be really an honest one of college life. It is devoted to the thesis that all college life isn't one long rah-rah-rah. They young players are faced with real and mature problems which they work out in a human and believable manner.

"CLIVE OF INDIA"

Great men should be pictured on the screen with the same forthright truth as they are now revealed in books, says Ronald Colman.

Colman follows out his conviction in his portrayal of the great British hero, Clive of India, released through United Artists and showing on Saturday at the King's Theatre.

"Clive of India" was written by two Englishmen, W. P. Lipscomb and R. J. Minney. "The picture does not attempt to gloss over Clive's duplicity in forging the signature of a British admiral to a secret treaty in an effort to get rid of the tyrant who was then ruling India.

RECKLESS

Jean Harlow has found herself on the threshold of a new career.

The platinum star reaches, the newest character transformation in the course of her career as a singing and dancing star in her new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Reckless" which has its initial screenings to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre and in which she is co-starred with William Powell.

"Reckless" directed by Victor Fleming presents several dazzling musical numbers—one by Jerome Kern—and has a cast including Franchot Tone, May Robson, Ted Healy, Nat Pendleton, Robert Light, Rosalind Russell and Henry Stephenson.

"GREAT HOTEL MURDER"

Final Showing At The King's

Roter, Fox Film stylist says a woman is as stylish as her hat. For Spring, he features combinations of straw and felt.

He has designed a hat of the Breton sailor type for Rosemary Ames, with turned-up brim of navy blue felt a crown of loosely woven straw.

For early spring wear he has created a white pique bonnet type for Miss Ames in "The Great Hotel Murder," now at the King's Theatre. She wears it with a short coat and cape ensemble of navy blue wool and white pique blouse which repeats the fabric used in the hat.

High heels in feminine shoes are demoded, says Roter, who keeps a watchful eye on accessories. Heels one inch and a half high "are tops" in smartness for springtime wear.

Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen are co-featured in "The Great Hotel Murder," a Fox Film picture, produced by John Stone, directed by Eugene Forde, and based on Vincent Starrett's mystery story, "Recipe For Murder."

EX-QUEEN OF SIAM ROBBED

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 7. Thieves who broke into Knowle, Surrey, where the ex-Queen and ex-Queen of Siam are staying, ransacked a dressing-room adjoining the room in which they were sleeping, flung documents on to the floor and stole the ex-Queen's personal jewellery.

"We believe the thieves got into the house through a scullery window in the early hours yesterday," a member of the household told a reporter to-day.

"The jewellery stolen was part of the ex-Queen's valuable collection and included rings, bracelets and necklaces.

"Careful check has been made of the documents thrown out of drawers. None is missing.

"No one heard any disturbance in the house and of the three dogs—one is in the house—none was heard to bark."

A piece of lipstick found outside the scullery window at first led to the belief that one of the thieves was a woman. This is now considered unlikely.

ROYAL VISIT TO GLASGOW

Duke and Duchess
Of Kent's Tour

(Special Air Mail Service)

Glasgow, June 7. The Duke and Duchess of Kent had a busy day in Glasgow to-day, when they made a tour of the city to perform a number of ceremonies.

In the early part of their journey through the south side of the city an unusual incident occurred which ended with the Royal visitors making the remainder of the tour in a police speed motor-car. Because of the restiveness of one of the two horses which drew the Royal carriage the Duke and Duchess left it and entered an open low-seated police motor-car which headed the procession. The Duke and Duchess sat in the back of the car and the Chief Constable of Glasgow took his seat in the front.

All along the route the Royal visitors were warmly received. So enthusiastic were the crowds that as the motorcar, proceeding slowly, approached the City Chambers in George Square the thousands of people gathered there surged in and broke through the police cordon. The crowds were practically in touch with the Royal car.

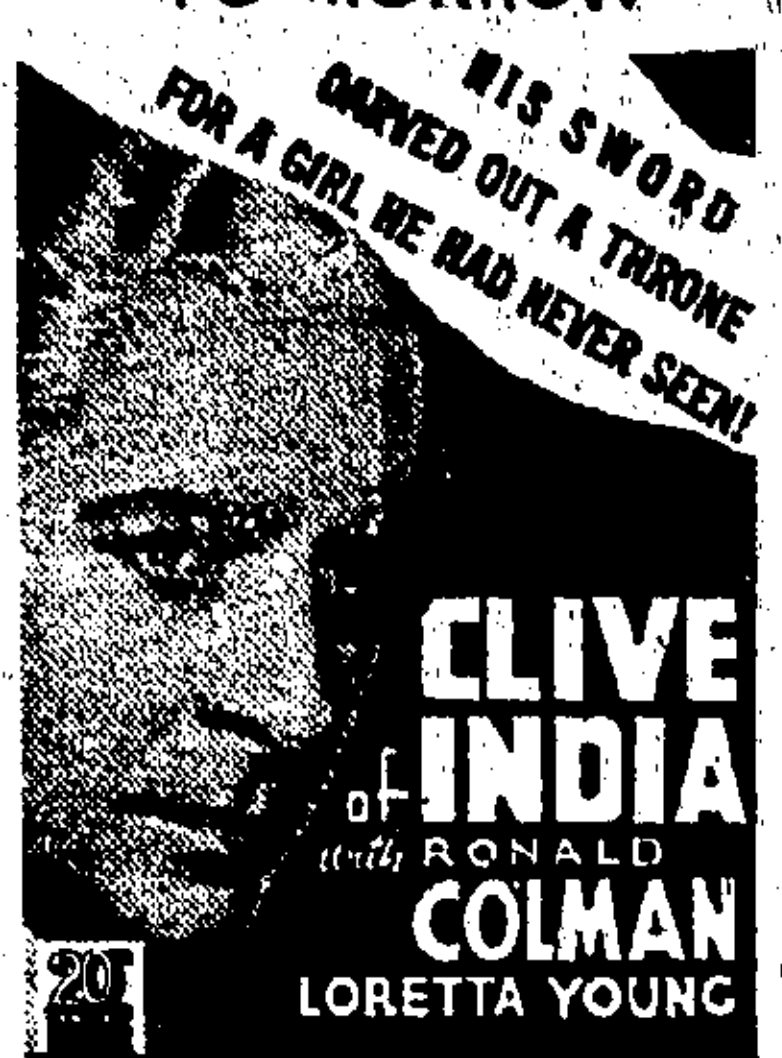

When the Royal carriage was proceeding through Maryhill some men rushed into the middle of the street and waved a red flag, but the police quickly intervened and took five men into custody. The procession continued on its way without any further untoward happening.

INFIRMARY EXTENSION

On their arrival at the Central Station about midday the Duke and Duchess proceeded to the Station about midday the Duke of Kent opened an extension. Their Royal Highnesses made a tour through the wards and conversed with a number of the patients. They then drove to the City Chambers, where luncheon was served. After the luncheon Lord Provost Sir Alexander Swan welcomed the Royal couple to Glasgow.

Thereafter a visit was paid to Canaburn Infirmary, where the Duke laid the foundationstone of the Royal Infirmary Auxiliary Hospital and the Zachary Merton Convalescent Home. The Royal party afterwards proceeded through the city to the East End on their way to Edinburgh.

TO-MORROW

DESERT HORROR

Widow Dies Near
To Safety

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 7. What mystery lies behind the Sahara tragedy of thirst and despair which the discovery of the bodies of an Englishman and Englishwoman has brought to light?

While police, trying to answer the question, were giving orders for the exhumation of both bodies yesterday, first news of the woman's fate reached her father, Dr. William Ainslie, of Hereford. The blow was heightened by the fact that less than six weeks ago his daughter's husband, Mr. Ronald William Henry Knight, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Churchill Knight, formerly of Shanghai and now living in Devon, was killed in a crash while flying not far from the spot where Mrs. Knight died.

A close friend said that Mrs. Knight, who was twenty-six, was always courageous. She and her husband, who were both at Cambridge, had shared many adventures.

This is the story of the tragedy the police have so far pieced together. In the early morning of May 22, says Reuter, Mrs. Knight left Agades by car to cross the sunbaked Haggard Mountains. She was accompanied by Mr. Peyton, an Englishman living in Switzerland, and two Frenchmen, M. Huebert, aged twenty-five, and M. Chauveur, aged twenty-eight, a French trader living at Kano, in the Sahara.

"SUN WILL KILL YOU"

Twenty-five miles from their goal—the oasis of Tamanrasset—the engine failed for lack of petrol.

Mrs. Knight and Mr. Peyton decided to walk to the nearest post. The two Frenchmen, who knew the desert warned them not to go.

But the Englishwoman and her friend left on the trek. A relief party set out. Eight days passed. Suddenly they spied a car standing silent and deserted in the desert wastes.

There they found two human skeletons—Huebert and Chauveur—in a shallow grave, hollowed out to provide coolness and shade. The rescuers continued on the trail and after some time spied a body lying in the sand. It was Mrs. Knight. Her body was in a terrible condition, her bloodstained clothing in shreds, and her fists and thighs covered with penknife cuts.

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 7.

The dates of the Aldershot Tattoo are this year a little different from the normal. The first performance will be on a Thursday, i.e. June 13. Then will follow performances on Friday and Saturday, the 14th and 15th. The next performance will be on June 18, and the Tattoo will then be repeated each evening up to, and including, Saturday, June 22. There will thus be a blank Monday, with eight performances in all.

The motif this year will be "Crown and Empire," which the producers have made worthy of the great occasion afforded by the Silver Jubilee of His Majesty. The main item consists of a pageant of all those Sovereigns of England, prior to Queen Victoria, whose reigns equalled or exceeded a span of quarter of a century. In this cavalcade the military scope of each reign is touched on.

It is a pageant, however, in which we have to include Henry VI but to rule out Anne. Still, we have Edward III and Elizabeth. And not least, there is the fiery little soldier-king, George II, the last sovereign to command an English army in the field—and to win a great victory—and whose subjects in 1759 were to witness the most glorious year England had ever seen. "The Romans were triffers compared with us," said Horace Walpole.

1,500 BANDSMEN

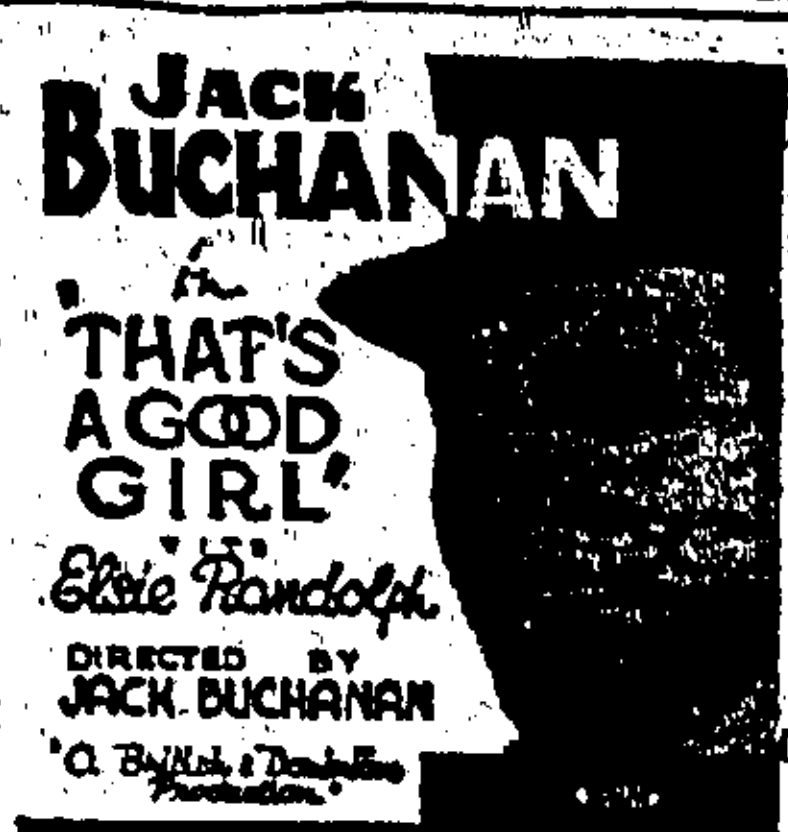

There will be the largest massed band ever heard—over fifteen hundred performers. And if there are massed bands, these will not be to the exclusion of more primitive music. A Press notice declares that "The Scots will return to the Tattoo in greater strength than ever." Never before has there ever been before in the history of the world, outside Scotland—a greater number of bagpipes playing together. This is a solemn thought.

An interesting display will be that of the drill of the Grenadier companies of the regiments of old time, from the days of Evelyn, who noted in his diary of 1678 the dexterous skill of this "new sort of soldiers called grenadiers." A Tattoo without horses would be a sorry business, so the 1st Cavalry Brigade gives a cathartic turn, in which a musical ride, a cavalry charge, and a meet of hounds are all staged.

The Aldershot Tattoo has no militaristic aim, and is divorced from all question of propaganda. In response, however, to popular demand, a modern battle will be included in the programme, and will take the form of an infantry attack upon a village, supported by mechanised fighting vehicles. As usual, each performance will open with community singing, and will close with "Abide with Me" and the National Anthem.

"ALL OF ME"

Dancing has been the open sesame to screen careers for many women, including Miriam Hopkins, but it is not generally known that a number of the screen's male favorites also started their stage careers as dancers.

George Raft, featured with Miss Hopkins, Fredric March and Helen Mack in Paramount's "All of Me," which will open to-day at the Star Theatre, is considered the latest dancer now in pictures.

"Sure, I was a dancer," he said. "I've danced all over the United States and Europe—got more money for it, too, than I did when I first started movie acting."

Modestly, Raft omitted to mention that he was considered one of the world's greatest dancers—a role which he will portray, by the way, in "Bolero," his next film—and that, while dancing in a London night club, he gave the Prince of Wales a dancing lesson.

"There is nothing effeminate about dancing," said Raft. "I was a bantamweight boxer, and played semi-professional baseball around New York, before I took up dancing."

Raft's role in "All of Me" is that of a love-mad slum kid whose intense affection and love for Helen Mack, teaches a Park Avenue debutante things about life and love she didn't know existed, and from them she learns the difference between her kind of romance and real true love.

Bless You!

"Want to leave me, Mary? I thought you were quite comfortable. What is for—something private?"

"No, ma'am, it's a sergeant."

"A LOST LADY"

Shyness and a wall-flower disposition are the last traits in the world that anyone who has seen him on the screen would attribute to Ricardo Cortez.

Yet Cortez, who plays a bold dashing suitor in the Warner Bros. production "A Lost Lady" showing to-day and to-morrow at the Alhambra Theatre, admits that he is positively timid in real life.

Cortez has been accused by many who judged him solely by his external attitude of being haughty and snobbish. He is nothing of the kind, his self-composed reserve being really what the psychologists call "a defense mechanism" to hide a sensitive temperament.

A small girl was entertaining her mother's visitor. "How is your little girl?" she asked.

"I am sorry to say, my dear, that I haven't a little girl."

"How is your little boy then?"

"Then what are yours?"

AROUND THE COURTSINDIANS AT LAW

An assault made on Akhmand Gull by two brothers, Mohan Din and Nawab Din, a motor car driver and a watchman respectively on May 11 at Lockhart Road in which the former was beaten into unconsciousness had an unexpected twist at the Central Magistracy yesterday, before Mr. W. Schofield, when Akhmand Gull in giving evidence stated that he did not remember whether a statement was made by him to the Police after he had regained consciousness. This led the prosecuting Officer, Detective Sgt. Fitches, in applying leave to withdraw the case against the defendants which was granted by his Worship.

Mr. M. A. da Silva appeared for both the defendants.

At the outset of yesterday's hearing, Sergeant Fitches, in outlining the case said that on May 11 at about 2.30 p.m. complainant left his house in Lockhart Road for the National City Bank where he worked as a watchman. He was walking along the road towards the Central District, and when near the playground between Johnston Road and Lockhart Road, he met the two Indians, who he knew to be the defendants. They assaulted complainant with sticks, striking him on the head and rendered him unconscious.

The defendants then ran off. Later, still unconscious, complainant was found lying on the road by two European sailors, who up to now were unable to be traced. The sailors called the attention of an Indian special reservist who brought complainant to a house in Lockhart Road where with the help of another Indian special reservist brought complainant to the Police Station. He was sent to hospital still unconscious. Complainant regained consciousness at about 4.15 a.m. the next day. He was later found to be suffering from a fractured skull. The two defendants were then arrested. They made statements to the Police under caution as complainant was in a serious condition. Complainant also made a statement when he regained consciousness at the hospital.

GIRL THE CAUSE

The motive for the assault appeared to have arisen out of a previous disagreement nine months ago. The first defendant and complainant both knew an Indian girl whom they both wanted to marry. The girl refused to marry either of them, but ever since both had been pestering her, and had threatened each other with knives. A brother of the girl reported the matter to the Police, but finding nothing against them, they were not detained. A truce was made at the station.

After complainant had given evidence Sgt. Fitches asked leave to withdraw the case against the defendants which was granted.

On behalf of the defendants Mr. Silva said that the first defendant was willing to be bound over with the complainant, but he assured his Worship that if the case had been proceeded with he could show that the second defendant was not at the scene on the day in question. The second defendant was accordingly discharged.

A counter-summons taken out by the first defendant against complainant was dismissed.

His Worship bound the two men in a personal bond of $500 each to be of good behaviour for one year.

The complainant stated that as he was the aggrieved party he should be let off whereat Mr. Schofield asked Sgt. Fitches to explain the matter to him and remanded the case for 48 hours.

Four months' hard labour with 18 strokes of the birch, or three months' extra of unit, was the sentence imposed by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Police Court yesterday on Wu Chi-chiu, unemployed, who pleaded guilty to snatching a silver bangle from the wrist of a three-year-old child while being carried by its mother, Leung Ng, widow. The theft was witnessed by a district watchman in Man Ming Lane. Defendant stated that he stole because he had no food to eat.

Hsia Yuen-kuen, unemployed, was sentenced to one month's hard labour by Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy yesterday, on a charge of trespassing in the Royal Naval Dockyard yesterday. Defendant was found near three submarines. He told the Court that he had gone there to look for a job on board ship.

SILK THEFTS

Sentence of two months' hard labour with two years police supervision was meted out to Suen Sui, a 18 year old unemployed when convicted by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy yesterday on a charge of theft of three rolls of silk valued at $15 from 42 Queen's Road Central and also with receiving the silk. On a charge of receiving, Cheung Chui aged 28 unemployed was discharged for lack of evidence.

The complainant was Mr. Jetta Murljma, manager of the shop. Sub-Inspector Tyler, prosecuting, stated that there now seemed to be a method of stealing from these silk stores. In the present case, a very complicated method was used, and the theft was committed without the manager or anyone else in the shop knowing of the loss.

At about 4.30 on the afternoon of June 18, defendant and two others not in custody, entered the shop and carried out the theft. They then hired a ricksha, placed the silk in it, and accompanied the ricksha to West Point. When near Eastern Street, a detective approached to investigate, but defendant and his friends immediately fled. The second defendant was nearby, and he was arrested.

Second defendant denied receiving the silk, saying that he saw first defendant commit the theft and went up to him to have a clearer look at his face. First defendant then offered him some money and asked him to keep quiet.

INTENT TO STEAL

Fines of $100 or six weeks' hard labour, and $50 or one month's hard labour were inflicted on two unemployed men, Kong Ping aged 22, and Kong Lam, aged 17, respectively by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy yesterday when charged with being on board the steamer Hailan with intent to steal.

Detective Sergeant Goodwin, prosecuting, stated that at about 7.15 yesterday morning, the defendant boarded the steamer Hailan at the Douglas Wharf. The ship had just arrived in port, and passengers were disembarking. The defendants picked out a victim, and first defendant went up to him and jostled him, but could not get anything out of his pockets.

A detective then saw them, but on being approached, defendants ran along the deck, and jumped into a sampan that was tied up alongside the ship, and then into the water. They attempted to swim away, but were chased by the detective in another sampan, and arrested. Both defendants had previous convictions.

DOG OWNER HEAVILY FINED

A representative of the Chan Ngai Hing Knitting Factory, 4 Pak Po Street, Mongkok district, was fined $50, or six weeks' hard labour, and ordered to pay $15 compensation to a Chinese boy, who had been severely bitten, or undergo a further two weeks' prison, when he appeared before Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday.

Inspector F. T. J. Portallion told the Court that the boy was bitten in no fewer than twelve places. The dog was removed to Ma Tau Kok depot where it became vicious in the kennels and was destroyed. The dog was kept as a watch dog by the factory.

Traffic-Sergeant Jamieson informed the Magistrate that the lad was first bitten about the arms, the chest, and the back.

It was stated that the factory was previously fined $10, on a similar summons for allowing the dog abroad unmuzzled and unleashed.

The boy was present in Court.

Tang Tat-chi, unemployed, charged with the unlawful possession of a radiator cap, and Cheung Lok-chi, also unemployed, charged with receiving two stolen radiator caps, were each sentenced to three months' hard labour by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday. It was mentioned that two youths were dealt with in the Juvenile Court for theft of two of the caps. "It is men like you who get boys to steal," remarked the Magistrate, imposing sentence.

UNLAWFUL PURPOSE

Because defendant claimed that he was in a certain house near the Prince's Cafe in Mongkok, partaking of tea when he was arrested by a Chinese detective, the case against Leung Fong (23) an electric lamp fitter was remanded by Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, until this morning to enable defendant to produce witnesses on his behalf.

Defendant was charged with breaking and entering into 22 Yuk Wah Street, 2nd floor with another not in custody, being in possession of a screw driver for an unlawful purpose.

For the prosecution, Detective Sub-Inspector C. Poyntz said that complainant, Gul Sher, an Indian employed by the Automobile Association, resided at that address and it was his habit when going to work every morning to leave his key with his next door neighbour, Tsang Kam Shiu, a building contractor.

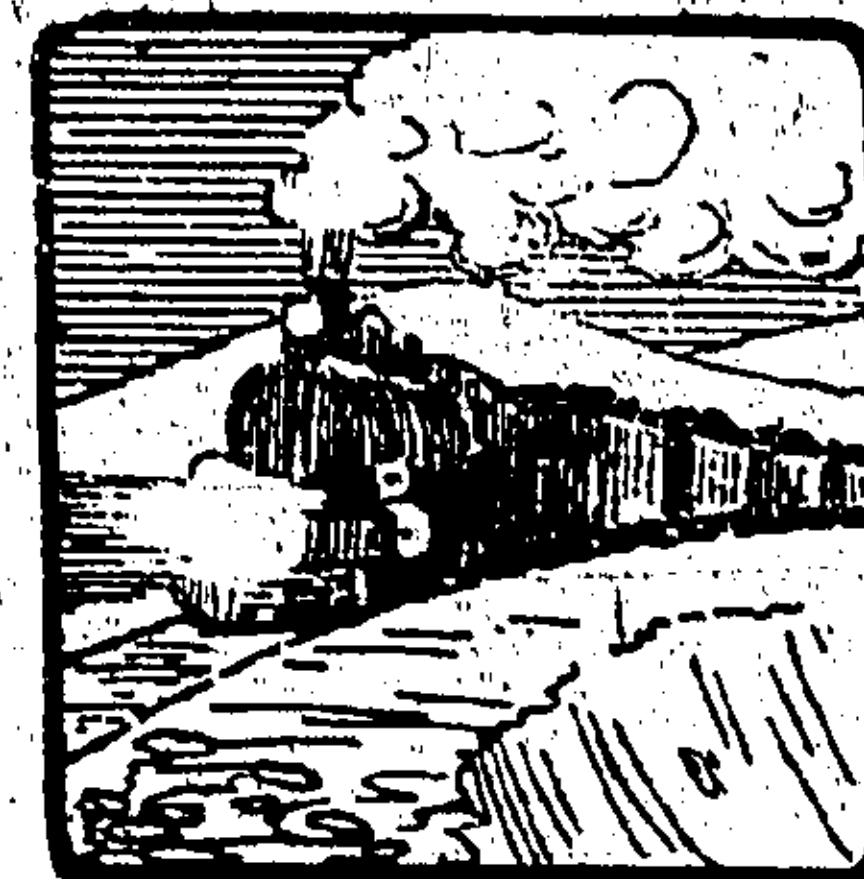

On June 10 when he returned from work he was informed by Tsang that his (complainant's) door had been broken open and that two men whom he saw in the room had managed to escape. Defendant was chased along Taiipo Road, then Kipsheim Street into Aplu Street, where he disappeared. The other man also made good his escape.

Later on a Chinese detective's attention was drawn to a large crowd outside 167 Aplu Street and on inquiry, he was told that a thief had gone up the roof. However after searching the roof fruitlessly, he noticed that the door of No. 149 was opened so he proceeded down the stairs. On the second floor he asked a tenant if he had seen a man and was told one had just left with a screw driver in his possession claiming to have repaired the waterpipe. The man in question had left his jacket behind stating that he was going down stairs to get some socks. The jacket was taken by the detective back to the station.

On information received he later proceeded to a cafe at 104 Prince Edward Road, where after waiting for sometime, defendant emerged with screw driver in his possession. The case was then remanded until this morning.

ILL TREATED MUI-TSAI

Lai Lau-tong, 46, a widow, residing at No. 378 Queen's Road, West, first floor, was charged with ill-treating Tsang Chan, a 9-year-old girl, and keeping her as an unregistered mui-tsan, on June 18, before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday.

Sub-Inspector O'Connor, of the S.C.A., prosecuting, told the Court that the girl was also struck on several days previous to June 18 by the defendant with a piece of firewood. Sometimes the defendant was alleged to have struck her with her hand. The girl was bought by the defendant from her father, when she was seven years old, for $100.

Defendant denied that the girl was a mui-tsan, saying that she was her niece. She admitted striking the girl on June 18, because she had gone into the street with two other children, and had nearly been knocked down by a car, and refused to return home. She tried to drag the girl home, but she lay down in the street and scratched at her arm, and also scratched her son when she tried to take her home. The girl received the black eye by falling down on a stone step.

Mr. Schofield remanded the defendant for 24 hours in police custody to fix the hearing for the case.

The girl was in court with a black eye and having numerous scars on her legs and arms.

NO PASSPORT

A fine of $10 was imposed on Leo K. Hinsky, a 20-year-old Russian student, by Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy yesterday when convicted with entering the Colony without a valid passport on Monday last.

Detective Sergeant Mottram, prosecuting, stated that defendant had been a resident here since 1931, being in school. He recently went to Shanghai to have his passport renewed, but encountered some difficulty. He was promised an emigrants' certificate by the Chinese authorities, however, but after waiting for some length of time and not receiving the certificate, defendant took passage on the Athos II for Hong Kong, unable to wait in Shanghai any longer.

The police were not asking for an expulsion order in this instance, but only for a fine, as defendant should have known that he had to possess a passport before being permitted to remain in the Colony.

Fines totalling $200, with the alternative of three months' hard labour, were inflicted by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Police Court yesterday on Yip Tung who admitted charges of keeping the ground floor of 53 Parkes Street as a common gaming house for po-pu lottery and the possession of 415 po-pu tickets. Detective Sergeant Goddard stated that defendant had a previous conviction for larceny in April this year.

"IS LAW REASONABLE"Lecture To Students

There was a large attendance including many guests at the Dining Hall of the Hotel Cecil, yesterday afternoon, when, under the auspices of the Wah Yan Past Students' Association, Mr. H. C. Macnamara, barrister-at-law, gave an interesting and instructive lecture on "Is law reasonable." The meeting was presided over by Mr. Ko Fook Sun.

After tea was served, Mr. Macnamara said:—"It is not every day that someone stung by an apparently unreasonable provision of the law declares that 'The Law is a Hass.' In the case of the Queen against Bumble there was some excuse for his irritation when they told him that his wife was, in law, presumed to act under his coercion. It would, to take a modern instance, be as if Mrs. Jiggs were presumed to act under the coercion of Mr. Jiggs.

Although we are not often driven to such caustic comments as Mr. Bumble's, yet one does often hear in casual conversation phrases that imply that the speaker considers law to be somewhat unreasonable. Such phrases are "He got off on a legal point," "He had merely a legal defence," "Of course in law he could do so and so," the implication being that no reasonable person would do anything of the sort.

It is, I think, useless for us lawyers merely to ignore this criticism, either expressed or implied, and I intend this evening to consider the matter, quite frankly, and try to arrive at some definite conclusion.

LAYMEN'S SAY

Whatever laymen may say about the law, there is a very strong body of legal opinion which is always prepared to demonstrate the Law's entirely reasonable character. The first great dictum on this point was made by a very great lawyer indeed who lived over 300 years ago. I refer to Lord Coke, who was successively Attorney-General, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench. I will tell you one thing more about him. That is, something which will I think perpetuate his memory long after the time when his own writings have been forgotten. He is immortalised by being referred to by the greatest of our English Poets.

Cyriach Skinner was a grandson of Lord Coke and a friend of Milton. I cannot refrain from quoting the first four lines of the well-known Sonnet, which Milton addressed to his friend:—

"Cyriach whose grandsire on the royal bench of British 'Themis, with no mean applause, Pronounced, and in his volumes taught, our laws which others at their Bar so often wretch."

Our Judges do not as a rule earn the wholehearted approval of poets. Lord Coke was lucky. I will now proceed to tell you what he said about the reasonableness of our law. He says:—

"And the law, that is the perfection of reason, cannot suffer anything that is inconvenient. For reason is the life of the law, may the common law itself is nothing else but reason; which is to be understood of an artificial perfection of reason, gotten by long study, observation and experience and not of every man's natural reason."

This, to my mind, is an extremely penetrating remark, and I propose to make it the basis of my study of this somewhat difficult question.

LEARNED REMARKS

Now had a great lawyer either Lord Coke, or some other, been present when Mr. Bumble pronounced his celebrated remark the great lawyer could have explained to Mr. Bumble, had the latter been willing to listen to him, the difference between the perfect reason of the law and the imperfect, because merely natural, reason of Mr. Bumble. The learned map might have spoken such words as these: "your irritation, Mr. Bumble, is natural, and, in the circumstances, excusable. Still the law is not quite such a 'Hass' as you think. The rule which you find so irritating is so merely because it hardly fits your wife's particular case. Yet in itself it is merciful rule. Prisoners cannot give evidence in their own defence and if it were not for this rule many married women would have been condemned to death for crimes which they in fact committed entirely under their husband's coercion. The law must act by general rules and it's better that one bad woman, like Mrs. Bumble, should suffer for crimes in respect of which they are both morally and legally innocent."

If Bumble, I say, had been willing to listen to such an oration he might, or might not, have modified his harsh pronouncement about the law.

Whatever might have been said about the rule in question in Bumble's time it was felt as time went on, that it was out of touch with modern realities, particularly I should think since the passing of the Act of 1888 which enabled prisoners to give evidence on their own behalf. Still the rule survived, that reform by 27 years and was not abolished till 1925. Of course even now a married woman is entitled to acquittal in certain cases, if she can prove that she acted under her husband's coercion. The law, however, will not now presume coercion.

BUMBLE'S COMPLAINT

It is clear then that Bumble's main cause of complaint was that a rule which might very well have been a reasonable one, at some time or other, was in his particular case distinctly absurd. So it will often be. The natural reason of which Lord Coke speaks does not always discern what is reasonable in law; particularly when this personal rights and feelings of the employer of "natural reason" are concerned. This human weakness does in fact account for a great many of the complaints as to the unreasonable character of law that we hear around us. For example some of us, wonder at our water supply being restricted while it is actually raining.

On the other hand can we really approve of Lord Coke's dictum that law is the perfection of reason even if we allow it to be judged by that "artificial perfection of reason gotten by long study observation and experience" in other words is law entirely reasonable even viewed by a lawyer who has to have, as a rule, Lord Coke undoubtedly allowed his enthusiasm for his favourite study to carry him too far.

Law is a human device and, like all human devices, it is imperfect. Lord's Coke's dictum is right to this extent that the law in itself is founded on reason, and that to be understood it must be judged by those who have made it the subject of study. So far so good. He rightly emphasises a fundamental fact that law is reasonable, and also a distinction that the reason that would judge it must be an informed and instructed reason.

EXAMPLES OF LAW

Now it would be no use at all for me to give examples of how law appears to be unreasonable to the layman. It can occur in an almost infinite variety of ways. What it will be more useful to do will be to consider cases in which law appears to be unreasonable even to a lawyer and to account, so far as possible, for these imperfections. To know all is to pardon all and I can at least point out unreasonable provisions in our law explain how they came about and, in some cases, how they have been, or can be, corrected.

Before starting on this delicate task I would like to say that it is only too easy to exaggerate what is definitely unreasonable is exceptional. In the vast majority of cases the law works reasonably enough, sometimes in spite of the fact that it is not so reasonable as it might be. Even in ordinary life we do not always say exactly what we mean. To address someone as "Dear Sir" or more intimately as "Dear Jones" does not either express or imply any affection in fact. All our ordinary life is, in details, unreasonable, if by reasonable we mean a strict adherence to logic.

It is not surprising therefore to find that in law the legal instrument does not always say exactly what the instrument actually means. Take for example the interesting and common example to a mortgage of land in the usual form. Of such a document, Lord Macnaghten, one of the

SHIP ON FIRELittle Damage

While the auxiliary schooner Tait Maru was moored off Wan-chai yesterday morning, a fire broke out which at first was thought to envelope the whole ship.

The engines were started at 9.15 a.m. and flames began to pour out of the exhaust. These spread to the bridge and in no time the wheel house was in the grip of the flames.

The crew equipped with fire extinguishers kept the fire in check and through their prompt action the fire was prevented from doing further damage, though the vessel was made of wood and the decks were piled high with crates.

The fire was under control by the time a naval tug and a fire float arrived on the scene. On the whole the damage was not very great.

Of 100 tons the Tait Maru is mostly engaged in carrying perishable goods from Formosa to the Colony. She belongs to a fleet of trawlers operating from this Colony.

greatest of our modern lawyers, said, in the course of a judgment in the House of Lords "My Lords, I doubt very much whether 'any-one has understood a mortgage of land in English form by the light of pure reason.'"

Now you all know, roughly what a mortgage is. It is a security for the repayment of a loan. As someone once said of something else it is "only that and nothing more." In practice the form is very different from the reality. The mortgagee subject to a condition that if the mortgagor pays off the loan on a certain day the mortgagee will reassign the property. On the face of the document if the mortgagor does not happen to pay off the loan on the appointed day his land is gone for ever. It would, however, be a very foolish mortgagee who would try to treat the land as his own even after the failure to reassign on the appointed day. The Court, acting as a court of equity, will always compel him to reassign the property upon tender of the principal of the loan, interest and costs. This obligation binds not only the mortgagee but his heirs, and anyone to whom he chooses to assign the mortgage. What I want to point out is that there is never in fact a word in the mortgage which will reveal this essential fact. The instrument says one thing, it means in reality, something very different. The real terms are implied in the doctrines of equity, and though these are centuries old they are never expressly mentioned in a document which is, in theory, supposed to express the real intentions of the parties. I will not try to elaborate this curious situation for fear of becoming too technical, and you must take my word for it that what I am telling you is true.

MACDONALD TO RESIGNContrary To Precedent To Make Statement

(SPECIAL AIR MAIL SERVICE).

London, June 7.

Mr. MacDonald's resignation from the office of Prime Minister will be tendered to the King a week to-day—on June 8.

That he will be called upon to deliver another speech in Parliament as head of the Government does not appear to be likely. He will, however, answer questions addressed to him as Prime Minister in the normal way during the coming week.

The programme of business before the House of Commons adjourns for the Whitsun recess—apart from to-day's debate on foreign affairs, in which Sir John Simon is to be the spokesman for the Government—is not of a sort which would be likely to call for Mr. MacDonald's intervention.

Reconstruction Precedents

When Mr. MacDonald told Mr. Maxton yesterday that "it would be contrary to precedent" to make a statement in the House about Cabinet reconstruction, he evidently assumed that Mr. Maxton expected a statement before the King had approved the change in Premiership. That would be contrary to precedent, since only the King can appoint Ministers.

There is, however, a recent precedent for an announcement of forthcoming reconstruction. In December 1916, Mr. Asquith moved the adjournment of the House to announce that the King had approved a reconstruction of the Government.

He was able to give no details, and in fact the House had one abortive sitting before, over a week later, Mr. Lloyd George's Government was completed.

Since the war there have been seven changes of Government or major reconstruction. Never once has the Prime Minister announced them in advance. The House has met to find new Ministers in their seats.

Waiting For Father Coughlin

It will be interesting to see the reactions of Father Coughlin, the radio priest, to the Supreme Court's destruction of the legality of the New Deal.

When Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate for the Presidency Father Coughlin campaigned enthusiastically for his election.

"President Roosevelt is not going to make a mistake," he declared to his radio audience shortly after the President's inauguration, "for God Almighty is guiding him." The New Deal he described as "Christ's Deal."

His 10,000,000 radio audience will await his "Sunday broadcast with eagerness. It is on Sunday afternoons at four o'clock that he makes his political pronouncements.

His Tower Fastness

On the preceding Friday evening he retired to the tower-office of his new Church of the Little Flower, built out of the subscriptions of his adherents. He takes his Great Dane with him.

There he remains, cooking his own meals and preparing three addresses—the ordinary Sunday sermon, to be given at six masses, a children's sermon, and the radio sermon.

The radio sermon is preceded by a few verses of poetry and a hymn or two sung by a quartet. Then Father Coughlin gets down to it.

My illustrations show him in three characteristic attitudes—the persuasive, the tub-thumping, and the pious.

Dozen Copies For M.P.s

Official copies of the translation of the full text of Herr Hitler's recent speech will be available to M.P.s to-day.

There will, however, only be 12 of them—the maximum permitted by the rules of the House. They will be placed in the Library, where members will be able to consult them, but not to take them away.

This is not a White Paper—no precedent could be found for taking one out of the speech of the head of a foreign nation to his Parliament—but a departmental paper issued by the Foreign Office.

It will therefore not be distributed through either the Stationery Office or the Vote Office.

For printing a departmental paper of this sort the Foreign Office has its own plant.

The translation also was made at the Foreign Office. It will be found to differ in places from the translations sent over at the time of the speech. These are believed to have been made by the English department of the German Foreign Office.

Mussolini, Litt. D. Cantab

Signor Mussolini must have been reading Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. At any rate his order that high officials in their speeches must avoid phrases like "conscious as I am of my heavy responsibilities" reminds me of the anti-cliché campaign long carried on by the Cambridge Professor of English Literature.

If the Treasury Bench had been young enough to hear his lecture on largon they would never say "The answer to the question is in the negative."

Speaking of this favourite circumlocution, he remarked:

That means "No." Can you discover it to mean anything less, or anything more, except that the speaker is a pompous person—which was no part of the information demanded?

Sir Arthur proceeded to declaim Hamlet's soliloquy in the manner of the platform:

To be, or the contrary? Whether the former or the latter be preferable would seem to admit of some difference of opinion; the answer in the present case being of an affirmative or of a negative character according as to whether one elects on the one hand to mentally suffer.

The Duke should soon become an hon. Litt. D. Cantab.

Bachelor's Plea

Sharp feelings may be aroused in the House of Commons on Monday when Mr. Clifford Glossop puts the following question to the First Lord of the Admiralty:

Will members who apply for single tickets for themselves for the Naval Review at Spithead be given preference over married members who apply for two tickets?

Mr. Glossop is a bachelor.

Not in the Dictionary

Brig.-Gen. Clifton Brown confronted the House of Commons with a new word yesterday. He asked a question about "Stas-sanisation."

Sir Hilton Young in his reply obligingly furnished the House with an explanation of what this means. It is a continuous flow process for the treatment of milk. The word, unknown to any dictionary, is derived from Dr. Stassano, the Continental bacteriologist, who invented the process.

Angels from Moscow

Lady Chilton, who is now in London with her husband, tells me that the second large panel for the chapel of Lancing College is approaching completion.

She finds time to continue her designs for these tapestries—to which I referred before her departure for Russia—while in Moscow.

Recently she sent a number of drawings "c.o. The Foreign Office," to be duly sent to the tapestry works.

Not hearing of their safe arrival she despatched an anxious telegram, to which the reply duly came:

No angels yet from Moscow. In the end, however, the unexpected happened. The angels from Moscow reached Downing-street.

Boston's Lost Silver

Yesterday's sale for $25,000 of the Great Mace belonging to the city of Galway calls to mind the sale of the silver-gilt mace—in the form of an oak—associated with Boston in Lincolnshire.

This came up in 1929 in the late Earl Brownlow's sale.

In spite of the efforts of Bostonians to recover their civic relic (which had been sold in 1832 on the abolition of the old corporation), it joined the collection at $1,300—of a well-known American who has a domicile in this country.

EMPIRE AND TRADE

It is right that the thoughts in the minds of visitors from the Dominions during Empire Trade Week should be of business. A closer co-operation between the business men of Australia and the British Empire was suggested by Mr. Lyons and a comprehensive plan for the development of the resources of the British Empire was mooted by Mr. Forbes. Mr. Thomas was genial, as always, yet contrived to hint that there was such a thing as British agriculture and that it would be foolish to forget the trade of the rest of the world. Certain practical difficulties which have been explored in council are covered in these suggestions. Most nations nowadays aspire to self sufficiency—an economic ideal which is more for national than international trade—and the Dominions as much as any. It is all done in the friendliest spirit, but some of them do not make it easier to trade with them. There were indeed, those tentative beginnings at Ottawa; but fiscal tariffs are still high and preferences are still small.

Every one would be glad to see the Dominions have as much of the trade with the Mother Country as possible—with due care always to the British farmer—but if the arrangement is to be satisfactory to both sides there must be give and take also. Neither Mr. Lyons nor Mr. Forbes have much reason to complain in the progress in the British Market if we go into the actual figures. Take the meat trade for instance. Argentine has long had the lion's share, but if we take the six years 1929-1934, we find that our imports of beef from the Argentine fell from 8,587,000 cwt. to 7,073,000 cwt. or from 79 to 66 per cent., whereas the share of Australia and New Zealand rose from 9 to 23 per cent. There has been an all round fall in prices. Argentine's import values fell from $23.3 millions to $11.9 millions in that time. A rise was noticed in the Australian and New Zealand imports as against the Argentine. This was from $2.2 millions to $3 millions. The home producer who contributed 10,817,000 cwt. in 1929 sold rather less—10,592,000 cwt.—1934; but the value had fallen by about 10 per cent. As regards the beef trade the business with the Dominions is expanding whereas the same cannot be said of the Argentine, which is contracting. In mutton and lamb Australia and New Zealand which had 80 per cent. of the trade in 1929, had 80 per cent. in 1934, and in the same period Argentine's share dwindled from 27 to 14 per cent. Great Britain, by the way, contrived to increase her production of mutton; but still produces less than she imports.

An increasingly large share of the British market is being obtained by Australia and New Zealand in the meat trade. If that tendency were to be increased artificially still further at the expense of the foreign producer, we should have to be sure of gaining some adequate compensation for the corresponding loss in those foreign markets. Like South Africa which has a reasonably low tariff we make no complaint against New Zealand, but the Australian case is more difficult. There protection has gone a little mad, and seeks to foster industries out of all relation to their economic value. If Australian policy would consent to concentrate upon such industries as are appropriate to Australian conditions, there would be a better chance of profitable dealing. It would be unwise and impossible to force these things. Both sides can only be persuaded to steps which are in their own interest, although we should like to see the interest of the British Empire as a whole come into the calculation.

THE HAUPTMANN CASE

Brief Laid In Court Of Appeal

Trenton, June 20.
In a calm and legal atmosphere, strikingly in contrast with the emotional scenes at Flemington, Hauptmann's lawyers presented to the Court of Errors and Appeals a lengthy brief in support of their contention that a re-trial is justified. The brief laid the heaviest emphasis on the charge that the State wrongfully used varying theories at the trial concerning the child's death.

The burden of the State's evidence, according to the brief, was that the child was killed when it was dropped from the kidnapper's ladder, despite which Wilentz in summing up espoused an entirely different theory, namely that Hauptmann had killed the child before removing him from the crib.

UNFAIR PROCEDURE

The recent opinion of the Court of Errors and Appeals granting a re-trial to a negro was cited in support of this contention.

Although the Court did not make any ruling on this point in its decision, the Court observed that it was unfair to inject a new theory in a murder trial after the case had proceeded on a different theory because it deprived the defendant of his right of cross-examination on the new theory.—

THE PRESIDENT OPPOSED

By House Group

Washington, June 19.

Drastically modifying the Administration's proposals for the abolition of unnecessary holding companies, the House Inter-State Commerce sub-committee to-day reported to the full Committee of the House a Bill providing for the regulation of the holding companies.

Almost simultaneously, President Roosevelt at his usual newspaper conference, reiterated that he was heartily in favour of the eventual elimination of holding companies, as provided by the recently passed Senate Bill.

Under the amended Bill, as reported by the House sub-committee, the Security Exchange Commission generally could require each holding company system to confine its operation to one intergraded utility system, and if the Security Exchange Commission finds such limitation unnecessary in the public interest, it is to require a limitation of operations to such a number of intergraded utility systems as it finds may be included in the holding company system consistently with the public interest.

COMPANY TAXES

Another variation proposed by the House sub-committee was the provision that holding companies, all of which must register with the Security Exchange Commission, should have to pay after December 12, 1937, a corporation income tax of 15 per cent. on any dividends received from subsidiaries or other holding companies or their subsidiaries.

Mr. Samuel Rayburn, chairman of the full Committee, hopes the Bill will be reported to the House by the end of the week where efforts will be made, undoubtedly, to restore the so-called "death sentence clause" which would mean the eventual dissolution of the corporations.

The amendment also authorises the Security Exchange Commission to require divestment of non-utility property only where it finds its retention would be inconsistent with the public interest, but may not compel the scrapping of foreign holdings.—
Reuter.

INCREASE IN TAXES

Washington, June 19.
A general increase in taxes, especially on the largest personal incomes, imposts on larger inheritances and gifts, and a graduated tax on corporations, in lieu of the present flat rate, were requested by President Roosevelt in a special surprise message to Congress to-day.—

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER

BY NO QUARTER

Strike the cat's crupper, what a rain we've been having! Can History's pages show the like? There was, to be sure, the mighty rain of Senlac, where the hailstones came down so thick that they called them William's Arrows. Then there was the Great Rain in 1557, after the Devil's Black Frost, when the mighty Ox of Kensington was roasted whole on the frozen Thames. That was a Rain, if you like. Sir Walter Raleigh, got in with his little Cloak Act when the floods were only a day old, but a week or so later, Noah's Ark might have looked to its laurels, and a seagull flew away with the Royal Mace.

Or again, if we garner from the threshing floor of the past, there was the Thrashing Rain of Marseilles, in the days of the little Corsican, when the Mayor of Toulon hid his head in the bed-clothes, and the beacons blazed from Cannes to Calais.

DEEP SEA CONTROVERSY

The recent reports of a shark on one side of Hong Kong, and a Sword Fish on the other, have raised a storm of controversy in Hong Kong. As usual there is a strong body of Doubting Thomases, who refuse to believe that either of these denizens of the Deep were ever seen at all. Others suggest that the Sword Fish was probably a Taipan with an exceptionally long and sharp nose.

I cannot accept the verdict of the first school of thought. It is no new thing for bathers in the Colony to be attacked by strange Marine Monsters, and as recently ago as last August, Dr. Axel Aufgang was attacked by a shoal of spawning Octopuses, Octopi, or octoporum. The infuriated Doctor shrieked out the Athanasian Creed in Cape Dutch, a performance that so frightened the creatures that they ran for the mouth of the harbour.

In June, 1927, a Round-Rumped Bass (Bottomley's Haddock) entered Repulse Bay, and was mistaken by a local matron for her husband. In 1912, a Coastguardsman was attacked, and eaten by a cluster of infuriated Klippers.

My own theory is that the alleged Swordfish was in fact a Chinese mutinous submarine, hitherto unreported, which had lost its way, and suddenly thrust its periscope through a bathers' arm. Will this remain an unsolved mystery of the deep?

SHOULD CHINA ABANDON SILVER

Policy Advocated

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Nanking, June 15.

In an article entitled "Should China Not Abandon the Silver Standard?", Professor Chao Lan-Ping, well-known economist, advocated that China should abandon the Silver Standard in order to prevent a financial panic.

In his treatise, Prof. Chao expressed the opinion that the economic difficulties of China do not arise so much from the outflow of silver or the unfavourable foreign trade balance, as from the high exchange rates charged in this country.

This high rate of foreign exchange, Prof. Chao explains, is the direct result of the policy of currency devaluation adopted by the various Powers, and the Silver Policy of the United States.

In order to cope with the situation, China must go off the Silver Standard and lower the exchange rate, so that the prices of foreign imports will go up and the market for native products be expanded. The export trade of China will then be encouraged and promoted.

EQUALITY OF RIGHTS AT SEA

Berlin, June 20.

In an examination of Germany's future naval position under the Anglo-German Naval understanding, which reflects the official view, the "Voelkischer" estimates the total strength of the future German Navy at 421 thousand tons and calculates that Germany will be entitled to 133,750 tons of battleship of which she already possesses three 10,000 tons pocket battleships of the Emden type.

Germany, therefore, could still build cruisers totalling 32 thousand tons. Regarding the destroyer class, of which Germany possesses twelve of 800 tons each, she is entitled to add to her destroyer fleet not exceeding 43 thousand tons.—Reuter.

REPORT TO MOSCOW

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Moscow, June 19.

The Soviet Ambassador to Paris, M. Potemkin was received on Wednesday by M. Laval for a lengthy conversation according to a despatch from the semi-official Russian news agency, which states that the French premier had conferred with the Ambassador on the Anglo-German Naval Agreement and had informed the latter of the French Government's point in view of which, M. Potemkin immediately reported to Moscow.—Transocean Kuo Min.

DIPLOMATIC SUCCESS

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Madrid, June 19.

The foreign political correspondent of the newspaper, "ABC" considers the Anglo-German Naval Agreement to be of important diplomatic success to Germany, the latter having thus escaped the threatened diplomatic isolation. German diplomacy had not made the ex-Kaiser's mistake, who by his naval rivalry with England conjured up the Triple Alliance. The paper points out that Germany had always favoured bilateral agreements in preference to multilateral pacts of pompous international conferences. The events appeared to prove Germany to be right because whereas the disarmament conference failed to accomplish anything since February 1932, the Reich Government had succeeded within a few days in reaching a practical agreement with England.—Transocean Kuo Min.

THE GERMAN VIEW

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Berlin, June 19.

Viewed from the standpoint of being a possible limitation to the general solution of the European problems and at the same time demonstrating the only successful method of doing so, the importance of the Anglo-German Naval agreement far exceeds even its immediate value to the direct participants, is the gist of opinion of responsible German quarters as expressed in the officially inspired organ "Diplomatisch Politisch Korrespondenz". This importance has deeper significance to the Anglo-German agreement goes on the "Korrespondenz", and lies in the fact that by means of these fair and freely conducted negotiations in which the national interests of both parties were taken into consideration, it is particularly definite that an armament limitation has been attained.

GERMAN COAST

The vitally important role of the British Navy on the high seas has been recognised in the agreement equally with the German Fleet's task of protecting the long and drawn out German coast line and under all circumstances maintaining free communications for her ports.

The fact that such an agreement has actually been concluded may be regarded as evidence that the natural concern for her own vital national requirements can with some good-will be harmonised with the need for an round security.

Looked at in this way the Anglo-German agreement reveals a great step toward European peace. It is to be hoped, continues the paper, that the value of the agreement will be a favourable starting point for the progressive settlement of other problems ripe for solution. Then Europe will be more free from the load of mistrusts that burden it today.

The basis for this mistrust can be removed only if questions are approached in fair and mutual understanding which characterised the Anglo-German negotiations.—Transocean Kuo Min.

TECHNICAL POINTS

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

London, June 19.

The discussions between the German and British naval experts were continued on Wednesday at the Admiralty concerning the technical questions still remaining open.

The chief points to be decided are the details of the dates of the construction programmes and the types and sizes of the ships. After the meeting at the Admiralty, the Ambassador, von Ribbentrop, paid a visit to the Foreign Office where he had a conversation with the under-secretary of State, Sir Robert Vansittart.—Transocean Kuo Min.

ITALIAN OPINION

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Rome, June 19.

The Anglo-German Naval agreement is featured by the entire Italian press, editorial comments revealing a tendency to exaggerate rather than to belittle its significance—with regard to the restoration of Germany's naval power whereby England is accused of certain arbitrariness and forwardness.

The "Gazzeta-Popolo" voices the opinion that England for sometime has been "steering a straight course at full speed to Germany", this sudden change of her attitude shortly after the London and Stresa conferences evidently signifying that England is returning to her traditional policy of maintaining the balance of power in Europe by shifting weight of her own influence first here and then there in order to remain master of the situation.

The "Popolo di Italia" raises the objection that while Italy was the first power to recognise that peace treaties are not everlasting it should be said however that the Anglo-German agreement touches on international obligations in which America, Japan, France and Italy are also concerned. Other papers like the "Messaggero" see the greatest significance that the agreement will prevent a return of naval rivalry which formed the chief reason for England's entry into the World War.

Great Britain, writes the "Messaggero", had evidently considered it advisable to recognise the fact of Germany's naval rearmament which otherwise could only have been prevented by another war.

The "Popolo di Roma" states rather pointedly that while it is undoubtedly convenient to recognise the fact which one cannot alter this will be hardly sufficient to make the procedure acceptable to France. The paper adds that France will probably point out that the agreement constitutes a new violation of the Versailles Treaty, and that Great Britain had no right to recognise this violation, especially since she herself protested against such violations only a few weeks before.

Geneva, June 20.

The Anglo-German Naval Agreement was received with mixed feelings in the League of Nations circles here since it is regarded as throwing a searching but not altogether welcome light on the difference in the results obtained by the Geneva conferences, and the new method of direct discussions on definite questions between the two parties concerned.

The feeling prevails that the agreement adds new emphasis to the failure of the Disarmament Conference to achieve any practical results.

The "Journal de Geneve" declares that Germany has attained practical equality of rights at sea, England unlike France, not only having merely recognised Germany's claim to equality of rights in principle but applied it in practice.—Transocean Kuo Min.

FLIGHT HELD UP

Singapore, June 20.

The flight of the two Royal Air Force flying boats from Singapore to Hong Kong was held up at Kaman Bay, Dutch North Guinea, owing to one of the boats being slightly damaged when it was bumped by the re-fuelling boat.—Reuter.

POCKET BATTLESHIPS

London, June 19.

Germany's pocket battleships will remain under the category of battleships proper unless any rearmament categories eventuate from the coming naval conference. This important fact was established to-day during discussions of technical questions between the British and German delegates at their London conversations, in which they are settling Germany's future fleet tonnage as compared with that of Britain.

The time limit for Germany's rearmament programme and the types and sizes of the vessels she proposes to build, were discussed. It appears that Germany contemplates building aircraft carriers, although Britain had hoped that her concession of parity in submarines would bring a "quid pro quo" from Germany in the matter of aircraft carriers. It was expected Germany would be content without these large offensive weapons.—Reuter.

VISITS TO PREMIER

London, June 20.

Herr von Ribbentrop paid a half-hour visit to Mr. Stanley Baldwin at 10, Downing Street. Subsequently Mr. Anthony Eden called on the Premier.—Reuter.

FURTHER STEPS

London, June 19.

Further steps in preparation for the holding of a general conference on the limitation of Naval Armaments are now under the consideration of the British Government.

Exchanges of information with the United States and Japanese delegates have already taken place, and it is anticipated that the Anglo-German talks which resulted yesterday in agreement will be concluded on Friday.

Expert Naval advisers attached to the British and German delegations conferred together to-day on certain technical points arising out of the agreement.

It is understood that the matters under discussion included such questions as sizes and types of ships and construction programme. Probably the next series of talks to be held in London will be with the French, but meanwhile Mr. Anthony Eden, the Minister for League Affairs, will visit Paris and discuss with the French Ministers certain aspects of the question with particular reference to the Anglo-German agreement.

Other matters of European concern will also come under review in these Paris conversations including the present stage and future steps to be taken in connection with the project for a Western Air Pact.

The Exchange of views between Italy and Britain on Naval matters is also in contemplation. The Soviet Government is being kept informed of the trend of these preliminary discussions, all

To Visit Paris

(Special to "Hong Kong Daily Press")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, June 20, 4.30 p.m.)

Paris, June 20.

Mr. Anthony Eden's forthcoming talks with the Premier and Foreign Minister Laval will not be restricted to the discussion of the Anglo-German Naval Pact but will embrace the entire complex of the European armament and security problems, according to diplomatic circles here.

Above all it is said that the problem of the conclusion of the Eastern European Non-Aggression and Consultative pact will be examined.

MR. ANTHONY EDEN.

Since the French Government has not yet replied to the German Note, pointing out the incompatibility of the French-Soviet Pact with certain stipulations of the Locarno Treaty, it is expected that this will be one of the other subjects discussed by the two statesmen, particularly in view of the interest Britain is supposed to be showing in this particular problem.—Transocean Kuo Min.

TELEVISION FOR THE EMPIRE

Important Deal Completed

San Francisco, June 19.

The possibility of a television service encircling the whole of the British Empire was revealed by Mr. McCargar, president of the Farnsworth Television Service, who announced the completion of a deal with the Baird Television Ltd., London, whereby Messrs. Baird & Co. will have the use of the Farnsworth patents.

Mr. McCargar added that the technical development of television had reached the stage at which it was ready for general use and the expense involved was not greater than the present sound broadcasting.

Combination receiving sets are expected to cost a little over £25.—Reuter.

SUNG LEAVES

And Confers With Chin

Peiping, June 20.

Sung Cheh Yuan may go to Tientsin later to-day; he refused to see members of the Press on arrival here.

It was learned late last night that he received orders from Nanking to leave and within three hours he was on the express for Peiping. During the night his train met that of Chin Teh Chuan and they conferred for half-an-hour, Chin offering to resign with his chief, Sung, urging him to proceed to Kalgan.

Sung's secretary told the Press that Sung had handed over the command of the 29th Army to General Chang Tse Chung, commander of its 38th Division, and assured him that peace and order in Kalgan would be secured.

It was added that the Charhar settlement is being carried out in accordance with the orders received from Nanking.—Reuter.

DOIHARA IN PEIPING

Peiping, June 20.

Major General Doihara unexpectedly arrived from Tientsin this afternoon and when interviewed said that he was not on any special mission but just wished to investigate the situation on the spot.

Sung Cheh Yuan left for Tientsin this afternoon by motor car.—Reuter.

Tientsin, June 20.

The two Japanese destroyers which anchored off Tientsin since last week will be leaving for Port Arthur on Saturday morning.

REPORTS AWAITED

London, June 19.

It was stated in the House Commons on behalf of the Foreign Secretary that he was awaiting further reports and could not at present say whether recent the Japanese actions in Hopei could be said to have involved the Japanese Government in a breach of the Nine Power Treaty. Certain enquiries were however being made of the Japanese Government.—British Wireless.

LATEST CRISIS

London, June 19.

The latest crisis in Peiping's history can only confirm the impression that the maintenance of the British Embassy there is an anachronism declares "The Times". The centre of British diplomacy should be at the heart of China, namely Nanking. If Peiping is to become a mere museum of past glories and an exposed, defenceless border city, it will decline still more in importance.

As a result of the latest episode in Sino-Japanese relations the power of China has sustained another cruel blow. Though the Japanese militarists acted contrary to the wishes of the Foreign Office it is only too certain that Japanese diplomacy will not disdain the fruits of the soldiers' incursions into diplomacy.

NO ALTERNATIVE

Referring to the Japanese demand for the removal of the Governor of Charhar, "The Times" says that the Nanking Government can do nothing else but give way. They have not protested to the League of Nations because doubtless they fear such action might draw fresh lightning on their heads and fresh hostilities with Japan would probably break the partial union of Central China which they have so painfully achieved.

In the meantime they will continue to hold Hopei and Charhar, but on sufferance and with weakened forces and officials whose chief preoccupation will be the avoidance of the slightest dispute with the Japanese neighbour.—Reuter.

HEADQUARTERS COMPLETED

Tientsin, June 20.

The organisation of the Tientsin and Tangku Peace Preservation Headquarters was completed to-day and the regulations governing its functions approved by Nanking, according to official Chinese quarters.

THE SHORTAGE OF TIN

Continuance Of Restriction Most Desirable

London, June 20.

The recent severe criticism blaming the failure of the Buffer Pool to ease the extraordinary shortage of spot tin by releasing supplies caused Reuter to enquire from circles in closest contact with the Pool.

It was pointed out that the Pool was serving the interests of producers and consumers, firstly by keeping the price remunerative while gradually increasing the output; secondly, by satisfying genuine trade demand which mainly takes the form of forward contracts but refuses to facilitate speculation by affording the "bears" any opportunity of covering cheaply, and it was finally stated that the market alone was to blame for the unhealthy spot situation.

Reuter learns from another well-informed source that there is every reason to expect Malaya, Netherlands India, Nigeria and Bolivia to form a united front during the negotiations for the renewal of restrictions, stressing that they had hitherto borne the whole brunt of the restriction and if the countries who joined later wish to continue, they must either make equal sacrifices or else see the scheme collapse with an inevitable fall in price.

London is unanimous that the continuance of the restriction is most desirable. The present disorganisation of the tin market is reflected in the dullness of tin shares, several of which were depressed by the forced liquidation in holdings of circles closely connected with the industry.—Reuter.

London, June 20.

The Gold Cup was run to-day and resulted as follows:—

There were six starters, Tiberius winning by eight lengths while two lengths separated the second and third. Brantome finished fifth.—Reuter.

Three Japanese military aeroplanes reconnoitred the Tientsin area for four hours yesterday. MAX BAER AND SCHMELLING

"Playboy" Asks For A Bout

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Hamburg, June 19.

The well known German boxing promoter, Walter Rothenberg, who organized the recent fight here between Max Schmelling and the American heavyweight, Steve Hamas, received a cable from the former heavy weight champion, Max Baer, in which the latter announced his willingness to meet Schmelling in a return match to be held in Europe sometime this summer.

Baer is said to have declared himself satisfied with a considerably smaller purse than he had demanded for the title bout, previous to his defeat by Braddock. No exact figure was given by Rothenberg but it is considered likely that the Schmelling-Baer fight will be staged in Europe either in Germany, or possibly in Amsterdam or England.

The winner of this fight would undoubtedly have to be regarded as the chief contender for the championship. Rothenberg also announced that the new world champion Braddock has declined to meet Schmelling in Europe.

TENNIS RESUMED ONCE MORE

K.C.C.'s Fine Victory

The most notable of yesterday's encounters was the heavy defeat of the Indian Recreation Club, who in spite of the advantage of playing at home, was trounced to the tune of 8 sets to 1 by the Kowloon Cricket Club, while the University Tennis Club did very creditably in defeating the South China Athletic Association by 5½ to 3½. The Craigengower Cricket Club lost to the Club de Rekreio.

SOUTH CHINA DEFEATED

Playing on the Pokfulam ground yesterday, the South China Athletic Association was defeated by the University Tennis Club by 3½ sets to 3½.

LAWN BOWLS NOTES

C.C.C. "A" Should Win

(BY "F.B.")

With the senior league leader having a rest to-morrow, chief interest in the lawn bowls league will be centred in the clash between Craigengower "A" and the Bowling Green on the former ground.

Bowling Green I am afraid will have to be absolutely on tip top form if they expect to overcome the strong contender for the Senior Honour.

The Mainlanders have three well balanced teams and their akipis if on form are as good as the Craigengower's.

Craigengower's three rinks are well balanced and much will depend on the rink skipped by Bradbury. Although not trying in any way to depreciate the abilities of this rink I am not at all certain that his can be relied upon in a case of emergency.

Much of the Mainlanders' success will depend on whose rink will be pitted against Bradbury's but they must not overlook those that are skipped by Omar and Luz. A close game with the points going to the Craigengower.

C.S.C.C. CHANCE

The Civil Services have a good chance of notching their first two points of the season when they meet the Police at home. They have a strong rink in Grimmit's four and provided Hollidge and Jones can produce the same form as when they went down to Kowloon docks two weeks ago, they have a fairly good chance.

Police team is playing as well as ever and though playing away they can go on the field with confidence with the knowledge that they can always call on their superior reserve.

Playing at home had always been an incentive to the Indians and this week they are entertaining the Kowloon Docks team. Too much credence should not be placed on this fact as the Dockers are quite a capable team and in McKelvie's rink they will be looking forward to their victory. The Indians have not yet found a suitable solution to their problem. They are not so confident as when they started but perhaps this week will provide them with a change in their usual routine. The Dockers should win.

Another defeat stares the K.C.C. in the face when they play the Craigengower "B" unless their new found combination can be relied upon to put in that extra bit of "certainty." With their defeat at the hands of the Indians two weeks ago still fresh in their memory they will do well in concentrating upon this game.

Craigengower "B" will prove just a bit too good for the Kowloon Cricket Club and should get away with the two points.

THE JUNIORS

The Junior Leader should account for the K.C.C. while Talkoo, Recreio C.S.C.C. should also be on the winning list.

YESTERDAY'S GAMES

After a lapse of over a week lawn bowls competition started once more yesterday when two open pairs championship were decided.

Both of the games provided surprises and in the match between W. K. Way and A. S. Gomes v. A. A. Razack and W. V. Field, a keen and exciting game was seen with last year's runners up just notching into the next round by one point.

It was a surprisingly good fight put up by the losers and on the run should have deserved to be on the winning side.

The winners scored on 12 heads to the losers 9.

Both pairs were seen to good advantage and the result was at doubt till the last head when Gomes and his partner were leading by 23 shots to 19.

Field and Razack were unlucky and when placed in a good position were only able to score a three. The final result being 23 shots to their 22.

C.C.C. PAIR LOSE

J. S. Landolt and A. E. Coates the C.C.C. pair which was favoured in many quarters as being strong contenders for the honour sadly disappointed their backers when they lost to J. Shepherd and S. Eccleshall by 25 shots to 4.

Rain caused the postponement of the match between the Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago Browns.

The winners scored eight shots in the first five heads before Coates and his partner were able to notch a single on the sixth head. Thereafter they scored another single on the next head and the winners replied with a single and a three.

The losers were not putting in any sort of a fight and with the exception of three twos scored on the 13, 14 and 15th heads they were a beaten pair. The winners scored a four on the last head.

RECREIO PAIR LOSE

At the Kowloon Dock Recreation Club yesterday G. Strange and T. Armstrong (Civil Service) beat Noronha and Basto (Recreio) by 24 shots to 12.

This temporary service will extend over 14 days, covering the King's Jubilee naval review at Spithead. The cadets, all destined for the Mercantile Marine, will perform the duties of midshipmen and naval cadets on board destroyers, minesweepers, and the cruisers Cardiff and Vindictive.

CLAY'S PERSONAL TRIUMPH

Five Men Fail To Score

(Special Air Mail Service)

Llanelli, June 7.

J. C. Clay, the only amateur bowler to take a hundred wickets last season, achieved a personal triumph yesterday when Glamorgan dismissed Northamptonshire for 137 runs. Clay took nine of the wickets for 54 runs, this being his best performance for the county. Only one other Glamorgan bowler has taken nine wickets in an innings, Nash, the old Cardiff bowler, taking nine Sussex wickets for 93 runs in 1922. Clay relied on off spinners with a clever variation of flight and pace. The ball certainly turned, but only slowly, and Clay's success was mainly due to the accuracy of his length and flight against batsmen who were timid and hesitant. It was really on the fall of the third wicket at 95 that Clay's spell took command. From this point he was almost unplayable; his record for this period being eight wickets for 13 runs. Such a startling collapse was hardly suggested at the start, but although Bakewell and Grimshaw offered some resistance, the bowling was never really mastered. Clay, during one period, took three wickets with five balls, and the last eight wickets fell for 42 runs.

Glamorgan passed their opponents' total for the loss of four wickets.

BERLIN BOURSE

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Berlin, June 19.
Share buyers were cautious on Wednesday despite the exceedingly favourable impression made by the announcement of the Anglo-German Naval Agreement and the speech of the State Secretary Koenigs foreshadowing the re-organisation of the German shipping, especially in the North Atlantic.

The present price level being abnormally high, investors hold off, fearing price declines.

The fixed interest securities market remained becalmed.
